DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 5-7 and 12-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Griffiths in view of Frederick.

Griffiths shows all of the limitations of the claims except for specifying a user selected threshold different from the threshold of the service plan.

Griffiths shows, figure 10 and abstract, a method for providing a usage pattern for a customer of an intelligently-switched telecommunications system. The usage pattern provides historical information concerning the customer's use of the telecommunications system. One embodiment includes communicating either with the telecommunications system or with a data network and receiving a query for the customer's usage pattern. The query could originate from the customer using a computer device operating on the data network or from the customer using a telephonic/wireless device operating on the telecommunications system. The usage pattern is acquired from either a service control point operating on the telecommunications system or a database operating on the data network. The usage pattern is then communicated to the customer. The abstract and figure 10 show the steps of storing, informing and resetting. The unused minutes remaining shows the "threshold". Customers can curtail their use knowing that they are close to the threshold. (Customer controlling the parameter of time.)

In reference to claim 7, figure 10 is a display.

Frederick teaches a cellular telephone anti-fraud system, which also has feature such that (from column 16, lines 16-22) the limits or thresholds can be selected by the subscriber service or the owner of a wireless subscriber unit or alternately programmed limits (e.g. based on past usage) can be used. If the user-selected or the programmed limits or thresholds are exceeded, an excess usage signal can be generated by the profiling routine.

Based on the teaching of Frederick, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to modify Griffiths system to incorporate user selected thresholds in order to adapt or customize warnings based on customer usage and thus better serve the customer.

In reference to claims 12-14, they are substantially similar to claims 5-7.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to all claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Wendkos and Senn et al. shows systems of interest.

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
